

The Daily Courant.

Wednesday, April 7. 1708.

From the Antwerp Courant, dated April 13.

Madrid, April 27.

WE have Advice from Lerida, that on the 15th of this Month very early in the Morning, the German Collonel Schober with his own Regiment of Foot, and two Squadrions of Horse, together with a good Number of Miquelets, came unawares and beat up our Quarters at Graos, where the Viscount Puerto and Don Francisco Bernardo de Quiros commanded: That the Dispute was very sharp; but that the Enemy, when they saw the Regiment of Navarre and some Cavalry coming to the Relief of our Troops, retir'd towards Catalonia. On our side about 100 Men were kill'd, and many wounded in this Action, but we know not the Loss of the Enemy's; for 'tis said they carry'd off their Dead and Wounded with them. 'Tis advis'd from Badajos, that the Marquis de Bay was to take the Field with his Army the 6th of next Month, in order to enter upon Action against the Portuguese. There is little appearance that the King will make the Campaign. The Duke of Orleans has fix'd his Departure for Lerida on Monday next. The French Ambassador has notify'd to the Court, that the King his Master had sent a considerable succour of Troops, Arms, and Ammunition to Sicily. They write from Sevil, that above 4000 Houses in that City were ruin'd and destroy'd by a great Inundation of Water that had been occasion'd by the long and continual Rains that had fallen in those Parts.

From the Amsterdama Gazette, dated April 13.

Paris, April 6. 'Tis given out that the King has receiv'd Advice, that a Privateer of Dunkirk has taken an English Vessel, that was going to carry to Plymouth the following News, that the French Fleet being closely pursu'd by that of the Enemy, had made a Peint, and found means to get into the Firth of Tay; and that they had safely landed their Troops in the Port of Dundee, where the pretended Prince of Wales was receiv'd by the Scots with great Acclamations. To this the Captain of that English Vessel added, that the French Fleet had block'd up that Harbour to hinder ours from coming out. We expect the Confirmation of this important News.

Paris, April 9. Our Court and that of St. Germain are in great uneasiness, that they can hear nothing certain from Count Forbin, and 'tis now more and more apprehended that the Design upon Scotland has miscarried, for the Report that was spread abroad some Days ago, of our Troops having landed at Dundee, is no longer credited. We are likewise in no small pain for the Ships that lately sail'd from Brest to the Northward, M. Chamillard is gone to the Frontiers, to visit the Magazines and Fortifications. The King will this Week nominate the General Officers that are to serve under the Duke of Vendome and M. Villars, in the Netherlands and on the Upper Rhine.

Mons, April 10. We doubt now no longer of the Miscarriage of the Attempt upon Scotland, which in all appearance will cause great Alterations in the Designs that were projected for the ensuing Campaign. The Elector of Bavaria has put off his Departure for Namur, till the Arrival of the Duke of Vendome, mean while all the Troops have Orders to hold themselves ready to march into the Field upon the first Notice. Notwithstanding that the Magazines in this Town are more than usually stor'd, the King has given Orders to increase them, and a great Quantity of Corn, Meal and Oats is now carrying into the Cloysters.

Namur, April 10. A strong Detachment of Horse march'd out from hence this Night, as we believe to meet a Convoy of 60 or 70 Waggon loaded with Ammunition and Provisions, that were to set out Yesterday from Maubeuge for this Place.

Ghent, April 11. They write from Ostend, that they expected every moment from England the great Convoy of 3000 Horses to re-mount the Cavalry, and 5 or 6000 Recruits for the Troops of Great Britain; the Confederate Army being, as 'tis said, to take the Field the beginning of May. The great Preparations that are making here, give grounds to believe that some Siege is to be undertaken. The Enemy are making new Fortifications at Newport and at Furnes.

From the Harlem Courant, dated April 12.

Lille, April 7. Count Forbin return'd yesterday to Dunkirk with 17 Ships, which were soon follow'd by 13 others: They are much damag'd by Stormy Weather: The Number of the Sick aboard is almost incredible, and some Ships are still wanting.

Ostend, April 7. We saw two Days ago a great many Ships steering Westward, and believ'd them to be the Squadron of M. Forbin, and that the Design upon Scotland has miscarried. We expect every moment the coming back of the Ships that sail'd from hence for England with 10 Battalions.

Ghent, April 8. On Thursday last the English Artillery was disimbarke'd, and on Friday we receiv'd Advice from Ostend that 24 Ships of the French Fleet were come back to Dunkirk, and that others of them arriv'd from time to time. We hear from Lille, that there was a great Conternation in that Town, on Account of the French Fleet, aboard which were above 600 Inhabitants of that City as Volunteers.

Brussels, April 9. Though the Enemy have hitherto contradicted the Advices of the Miscarriage of their Design upon Scotland, and though the Letters from Mons and Lille have assur'd, that they had landed in that Kingdom, yet we receiv'd certain Advice Yesterday, that the greatest part of the French Squadron return'd to Dunkirk on the 6th, without having been able to land their Troops as they intended. The 5th, 14 French Fregates pass'd in sight of Ostend, coming from the Northward, and steering their Course towards Dunkirk: 5 more were seen afterwards, and the 6th in the Evening 7, so that in all 26 are already come back: The pretended Prince of Wales is likewise arriv'd at Dunkirk with the Troops that were design'd for the Descent, of whom so many are sick that the Hospitals of that Town not being able to contain them, a great Number of them were carry'd to Furnes and other Places.

From the Brussels Gazette, dated April 13.

Brussels, April 13. Our Letters from Flanders, that arriv'd the 11th say, that the Ship on board of which was the pretended Prince of Wales, and that had been seperated from the Squadron of M. Fourbin by stormy Weather, and in a Mist, arriv'd the 7th,

7 h, with some other Ships at Dunkirk, where that Prince landed.

From the Amsterdam Courant, dated April 14.

Brussels, April 11. The pretended Prince of Wales got into Dunkirk on Saturday last, and set out for St. Germain the next Morning.

From the Leiden Gazette, dated April 13.

Hague, April 11. The Duke of Marlborough having left London on Monday last about 4 in the Morning, arriv'd at Margate at 7 that Evening, where he embark'd, and set sail under the Convoy of 4 British Men of War. Last Night about Mid-night he safely arriv'd here, with the Counts Maffei, Legnasco, and Lecaeraine, Major General Stanhope, and several other Persons of Note. About 8 this Morning he went to the Emperor's Ministers to pay a Visit to Prince Eugene of Savoy: He went likewise to Visit the grand Pensioner Heinius, and at his return to the Earl of Albemarles, where he is lodg'd, he was complimented upon his Arrival by the Foreign Ministers, the General Officers, and a great Number of Persons of Quality. This Afternoon he has been in Conference with the Grand Pensioner, and with several other Lords of the State. 'Tis said, that after he has held several Conferences with the Lords-Deputies of their High Mightinesses the States-General, as also with Prince Eugene of Savoy, and some other Generals concerning the Operations of the ensuing Campaign, he will return for a short time to the Court of Great Britain to give the Queen an Account of what passes in those Conferences: And that Prince Eugene will set out for Vienna the 21st or 22d of this Month.
